The Pastor Speaks

Rev. Thomas Waddill

Where does the world of today stand in relation to God's standard of righteousness? Where does this so - called "Christian" nation of ours stand in relation to the justice which God requires? What does our state do to meet God's high demands? Does Appomattox County let God's will be the guiding light in making decisions? One has only to read the papers or listen to the radio to find the answer.

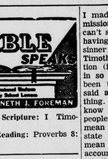
Men outrightly defy God, deny His existence, and rebel against his rule. The rights of men are flagrantly disregarded. The Ten Commandments are broken daily by governments as well as individuals. Never has crime been so respectable. Society, taken as a whole, embraces a morality or expediency; i.e. whatever helps me get what I want is all right.

But now lets' turn the spotlight on ourselves, for individuals make up society. What do we know of God's requirements for men? Are we willing to measure ourselves by the yardstick of God? When weighed in the balances most of us are found wanting. Since individuals make up society and out of society come our leaders, it is easy to see why our nation is in such a state of moral decay.

I recently heard the statement made that when a person gets old he is the same as he always was only more so. The same can be said of those in public life. A man of integrity in private life will be the same when he serves the public. A dishonest man will steal when elected to public office just as he would in private.

This places squarely upon us the responsibility of having honest, upright government. At present we have the right, we have the responsibility, of choosing the kind of governing officials we want. If we choose honest men we will have good government; if we choose men of questionable character we shall have a morally decadent government. If we do not vote at all we have shirked our responsibility to God and to our fellow man, and have no right to complain regardless of the type of government we get. If it puts us in chains we deserve it!

Examine God's standards for yourself, for society, and for your country. Then accept your responsibility to make each of these conform to God's requirements. As a God fearing man, as a loyal American, go to the polls next Tuesday and VOTE.



THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Background Scripture: I Timothy 6.

Devotional Reading: Proverbs 8: 10-21

Truth About Money

Lesson for November 1, 1964

If you add up the people in the world who are rich and the people who want to be rich, you will just about have the sum total of the people in this world. Even those who want to be rich don't always hope to be rich, but that is another story. Now the Bible's attitude to money—meaning God's attitude to it—is surprising to the average American. Because the average American will say Yes with enthusiasm to three ordinary questions about money. Is money a good thing? Is it all right to want all the money I can get? If I get rich will I be happy?

Those Who Want To Be Rich

Suppose someone tells you he has an ambition to make big money. You would be likely to say, "Fine, I hope you make it. More power to you!" But in the letter to Timothy we read what Saint Paul has to say to his young preacher - friend about what to say and preach to people about money. Paul has no illusions about wealth. He had seen wealthy men and was not impressed. He has some pretty hard things to say about wealth. Perhaps he knew that Jesus had said, "You cannot serve God and Mammon" meaning wealth). Paul says money is a temptation and a trap. He even says that money, or rather the love of it, is the "root of all evils." He doesn't mean that every wrong act and sin is done for the sake of money. Anybody knows that would be an exaggeration. But if you want to see how right Paul was, just look over a newspaper and see if money doesn't figure in a majority of the crime stories.

Those Who Are Rich

You can hear members of Timothy's congregation the first Sunday after he got his letter from Paul. Maybe the first Sunday, surely some time Timothy would talk along lines that Paul's correspondence had suggested. He would be preaching away about the dangers of wealth, how we can bring nothing into the world and take nothing out — saying that the love of money is a soul - destroying thing, and so on. You could almost hear some man thinking: "What's this got to do with me? I made my pile before these missionaries converted me. I can't see that wanting money or having it ever hurt me. Am I a sinner just because I'm rich?" Timothy's answer to that question (if it was ever put to him in so many words) might have been to point out what Paul said about contentment, for one thing. The happiest people you know are not often the richest people you know. This doesn't mean that poverty is the best state for everybody. It does mean that if we look to our bank accounts for happiness, that is not the right place to look.

The Conversion of Money

Is a man ever converted until his money is converted? That is something that can be debated. But how do we convert money? Money is just a thing, and things can't have faith, hope or love. True; but in the strict meaning of the word "convert," meaning to change, money can be turned into something else. Money can be and is a tool, an instrument. It can be used to curse other men, it can be used to build up pride and selfishness; it can be a dagger to stab the soul to death. On the other hand, money used as a gift from God, carefully used in stewardship, not as if we owned it apart from God, such money (or possessions of any sort, for that matter) can be converted into good deeds. The question for Christians to ask is not, What would I do with a million dollars? The question is, What do I do with the money I have? It is just as easy to be selfish with a dollar as with a million dollars, And it is just as possible to be generous with your few possessions as it would if you were a millionaire.
